“Confined to a Wheelchair”
“Invalid”
“Disabled”
“Stroke Victim”

These terms paint a picture of incapacity and inability when they are used to describe people with disabilities. Fortunately, we have the opportunity to change the way people with disabilities are viewed. Efforts continue in Michigan to promote the independence, abilities, competency and talents of people with disabilities.

The Michigan Commission on Disability Concerns, in collaboration with community partners, has compiled a list of appropriate terms and acceptable alternatives to use when writing or talking about people with physical or mental disabilities.

We can help put an end to discrimination by paying more attention to how we communicate and help reduce the 70 percent unemployment rate among people with significant disabilities. Together, we can change what it means to be a person with a disability in America by promoting independence through equality.

The Michigan Commission on Disability Concerns serves as an advocate and information resource for the state’s 1.7 million people with disabilities. The commission’s mission is to achieve full participation, choice and self-determination for each individual with a disability in a way that promotes awareness of disability issues. The commission values equity, dignity and diversity consistent with the spirit of the Americans with Disabilities Act.
